

CAN I REALLY KNOW GOD?

Sometimes I get the distinct feeling that when someone speaks of the Creator, and in their speaking there's a message sent that directly or indirectly says that we cannot know God absolutely, they are suspected of being either spiritually naïve, or even worse unregenerate. We at present, live in what some refer to as space, time reality. That is the same thing as saying that we live in an illusionary world, and the more this world seems a reality to us, the more we are under the influence of the illusion.

If just a little light has penetrated my skull the idea that my world is illusionary at best actually brings me no discomfort at all, because with this realization comes the inner knowing, the witness if you will, that the I, the real part of me as opposed to the illusion is that mysterious one that I'm seeking in my ego to know. Also that inner knowing assures me, that the deception that I've chosen to take part in is a good thing.

Answers can only really come from within you, and sooner or later you will discover that anything you want to know, you already know, and in good time, it will surface. Every single religion, including the Christian religion, is at best only a substitute until the answers come. My take on religion is, it teaches me what God is not, or who God is not. This makes religion a necessary tool in this illusion, because knowing God is a process of elimination, and it's the ego, the perpetrator of religion that is eliminated.

You cannot possibly make anything happen. I speak to your humanity in that statement, because your real identity is infinite and limitless with no beginning and no ending. Beginnings and endings belong only in the illusion. In terms of knowing God, I present this question to you, if we could know God, would who we know be God? There are entities that are literally light years ahead of us in terms of evolution, and they say that they do not know who God is either.

So... what do I do with the idea that it's impossible to know God? My ego wants to think it knows God and it judges anyone who says they don't know God as lost and in need of salvation. There are you could say, many births and deaths that we have gone through on the physical level, and metaphorically speaking there are many births and deaths of a spiritual nature also. To say that I don't know God, is to invite some to tell me the gospel message, or rather their version of the gospel.

There comes a day for each of us when we will come to know that we have never been lost, and that the only one that was ever "lost" was the old carnal soul who was lost in the dream illusion, but no problem, because he was never real anyway and was self destructive. He was the dark side of God who wanted to experience being buried, lost in the darkness of this illusionary world of egos. This was all a good thing. This is producing a Divine Hybrid. The source of any reality, including this illusion is the unknowable, which dwells in unapproachable light, which in time will slay the Anti Christ in all men.

Anti... to me, means opposed to, not deliberately but ignorantly. Nothing but gross ignorance would even entertain the idea of opposing God, therefore God would excuse the transgression. Love does not ever punish, because it knows that ignorance will bring its own brand of hell until that hell results in repentance, which simply means to change one's direction and go by another way and at the end of the day that is always the result of more light, which is the other end of darkness. "No man shall see God and live"

How can I reconcile this with... "blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God"

The first man is of the illusion, illusionary; the last man is the Lord from heaven. Who are you? Who am I? If there is only ONE, who would we have to be? To the dark side of I, this is blasphemous. The truth about me will only be found by my approach unto the light, which I am doing each time I reach out to know the unknowable, and there is an irresistible drawing me to do so.

As the light I am irresistibly drawn to, slays the false identity, then the mask I've worn for eons is destroyed and the Lord from Heaven is revealed. There is only ONE of us, we all are that one!

The pure in heart are those who through being drawn to the light have had the mind purified from the lie. What lie? That we are separate from the power that runs the universe! As light comes, we will stop the infernal attempt to live life strictly dictated by a book, and listen for truth to speak.

That voice has no problem "rightly dividing the word of truth," whether from a book or from the "blind leading the blind." The ONE is the All, and the All are the one. My friend, to see this, is to clear up many problems for it answers many questions, and will eventually answer them all. That which I am seeking I am! As for knowing God, there is no God to know apart from creation. I believe that God can be known in no other way. I cannot for example love my neighbor as myself until I see my neighbor as myself this obviously holds true for my so called enemies also.

Knowing that Gods expression is pure unadulterated love without ego is enough to satisfy me. God's highest expression in this world we know is love, and all that this entails. This Love... loves simply because it's its nature to love simply for the joy it brings to do so. The scriptures were written by those who were inspired but also under the law as we all are. That law being a creation of the ego in man. For this reason the scriptures reach down to meet man where he is. There is truth to be found within the whole bulky book, and I will receive truth on the same level as my perception has evolved.

The more I know of God the less I feel I know. It will always be this way until I return to the Absolute. When that takes place, I'll do it all over again for the sheer pleasure of losing myself in the illusions that I have created. We are all returning. Perhaps we've already did this many times. You are me, and I am you, and we all are ONE!

Quote from "Notes from the universe"

COURAGEOUS IS THE SOUL

who ventures into time and space to learn of their divinity. For while they cannot lose, they can think they have, and the loss will seem intolerable.

And while they cannot fail, they can think they have, and the pain will seem unbearable

And while they cannot ever be less than they truly are—powerful, eternal, and loved—they can think they are, and all hope will seem lost.

And therein lies their test.

A test of perceptions: of what to focus on, of what to believe in, in spite of appearances.

Courageous indeed... the pride of the Universe
