

FREE Will OR PREDESTINATION ...?

How long has the church been divided over these things? Some of us have come to see the irony in the arguments that have been going on for centuries between different dominations concerning doctrines such as these two opposing ideas. Where is the irony? The irony is that both are true. As a very good friend of mind often says, "Everything is both true and false." But how can this be, asks the ego, that portion of me that I have o projected into the relative world.

There are two answers to this question, depending on who is asking. If ego is asking then the only answer that can be given that it will understand is, "It cannot be." If however, I can view things from that greater I that I am, there is no question, just a knowing that the relative world, that which the ego knows, cannot see beyond the cosmic movie that it is the actor in. The single vision, the eye that can see from the higher perspective knows that the cosmic movie it watches is over.

The I that we all are, knows that this movie that the ego is acting in, has already happened, and I am now merely sitting in the theater watching the movie. The I am that you are, is no longer acting. It has laid all the masks aside and is now just enjoying the movie. When in my flesh I see this, there is nothing more for me to do, but to enter into the rest that was prepared for me before the foundation of this world. Am I watching the movie, or am I the actor in it?
