

IT'S IN THE BANK...

When something resonates with me, it means two things. It means that I've now got it, and it means that I have not got it. All things are both true and false depending on perception. If it resonates, then at the soul level I've assimilated it. On the soul level it's now mine. There is yet another very important part of my being that has yet to "get it". The ego knows when anything resonates at the soul level. It always feels when something clicks.

The mistake the ego makes is that it takes the resonating as a sign that it now owns the revelation. In other words it assumes that what it has seen it now has. Transformation is a slow process but a sure one. That which resonates at the soul level will take time to surface at the ego level. If I have seen this, then when I sense the click that tells me something I've heard resonates I will receive it with the understanding that it's now mine at the soul level but now will take some time to manifest at my ego level.

So when I hear or read something that "clicks" with me I can in faith trust that it's in the bank. I just have to wait till it clears. ☺ That will be when it surfaces at the ego level. Then it will have changed me in some way. I then will not only agree with the revelation, but I will express it as needed. In the meantime, I can be grateful that it has been deposited in the soul bank and with patience wait till it clears.