

ONCE INSANE ...

Long, very long ago there was nothing but the ONE.
Who knows how many trillions of light years ago there was no space!
There was no time! There was absolutely nothing but the Absolute. We cannot know what this Absolute was... the mind of man is not up to the task. Even the Angels cannot fathom this mystery.

We shall never ever be able to approach that which dwells in unapproachable light. And just suppose that from somewhere very, very deep within the core of this Absolute there grew restlessness, dissatisfaction with the void that was its abode. What if there was this spontaneous awareness that grew within the heart of this being of light that it was not complete? What if there was an inherent something that needed expression?

And what if this grew to be a tormenting thing, this... whatever it was, that needed expression? What if this grew into light years of anguish and travail until it literally exploded into trillions of fragments that we call souls? What if the anguish resulted in a lowering of vibration which ultimately caused an explosion and now this unapproachable light through the explosion became the many? And what if you and I, what if all of us are what is left?

None of us can truly know exactly how creation happened. We can only speculate. I do believe however that the big bang theory is probably true, in principle. I once got in on a scene in a movie on the television once a few years ago. The scene was a man and a woman riding in a car. The woman asked the man {who was driving} if he believed in God. His response was that he believed that God was an event that happened a long time ago.

The woman then said, "You mean like the big bang" he said "sort of, and we're what's left". The point I would make here is that this creative benevolent Light, this pure positive creative intelligence this ONE that designed the rose, cannot be divided. Humanity, the prodigal Son, is equipped with the dual mind this is what constitutes him prodigal. This mind that knows of two powers is the mind that is insane. It believes that man is finite and God is infinite. This insanity is the inventor of every religion known to man.

Is man then the only inventor of religion? Man is a hybrid. Man is the Absolute after the explosion. Whatever I do, that which I am an extension of... also does. As for the absolute truth concerning God and man, they are one and cannot be separated. In the Old Testament you read where Jehovah gave the law to Moses. Over in Genesis it's God who gave the law. In the New Testament you hear John saying... "The law came by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ". So who gave the law according to the bible? Was it Moses or was it Jehovah?

It was both! God is sovereign, because God is all things appearing. All of creation is made out of the same stuff. If that thing out there called the church was in power as it once was, people like me would be put to rest permanently. However I believe there is so much light encircling the globe today that the darkness is losing ground in the minds of many. I and my Father are ONE! We all are the extensions of that which dwells in unapproachable light. We are here to express the unapproachable. We are so free that we can create bondage for ourselves and we do. Whatever God is, I am. How could anything that came out of God be anything but what it came out of? And since nothing exists but God who is omnipresence, there is no place else that I could have come from. The mind that is insane believes in a power that is apart from God.

We were once insane but now many of us are clothed and in our right mind. The bottom line here is that all things are good. Religion has a place in the larger scheme of things. There was a time when it gave me what I needed. I needed the control, I wanted the control. The sleepers will sleep on until they are ready to awaken. Then they will come out of the folds when they hear the voice of the Son of God.
