

ONE PLUS NOTHING IS STILL ONE...

Have you ever looked out at the world with its many forms and suddenly realized that you were observing your own creation? You did you know... Create it that is. If it wasn't you, then who could it have been since there is only one in all of creation? And if someone other than you created it then who might you be? And how in heavens name could you have gotten here? Is there a Creator and you equaling two? Where would number two have come from? There is no distinction between God and anything, for God and everything is still God. $1 + 0 = 1$.
