

PRAYER

In religion there are lots of opinions I suppose on the best way to receive answers from that which created us. I believe there is no “way” for me to touch God except my way. I believe that for you the only way to touch that hem is your way. Communication with God is strictly a personal; matter and it’s according to the faith of the one who prays.

I believe that generally I only need to ask God only once for whatever it is I need, and from that point on thank him for what I have asked him for. I am usually not comfortable with asking more then once because it tends to weaken my faith. But again, this is me, and it’s my way, and it works for me, it may or may not work for you.

The key to effective prayer I believe is your emotions. In other words I always go by my heart. It’s vitally important to pray what ever way I feel comfortable with. Whenever I get real with the inner one, results will be forthcoming. After all, this inner one, this spirit is not only part of us, but it’s the Creative Intelligence of all creation. By getting real with it we connect with it and when we do that, things happen.

There will often be some doubt in the mix, and I need to realize that all I need is faith the size of a mustard seed and the one within will always respond. I only need to exercise patience while waiting for God to respond. “Ask and you shall receive”! That is a promise and God keeps all promises. There are no conditions except that tiny little mustard seed of faith. I need to realize that if I’ve enough faith to ask, that’s all the faith that’s required, for that is the mustard seed.