

SIN CONSCIOUSNESS # 3...

If I was to confine myself to the Christian gospel...

Perhaps the cutting edge of my message would be the result of Calvary and what was accomplished at the cross. Actually what Christianity should have been was deliverance from sin consciousness.

What it has been however is the perpetrator of it. The whole message of the cross is "PAID IN FULL!" Either the old creation was dealt with there, or it wasn't. When I teach people behavior I bury them! Nothing is about behavior, it never was! Man came to believe that it was. The result...? Calvary!

Man came to believe in an outside God who was unhappy with him because he was less than perfect. If God were anything close to being as small as man in his thinking, we'd all be in deep bandini. God knows nothing of imperfection anywhere within the creation he has birthed. "Sin consciousness" is to the Divine mind insanity. To think that the Creator is capable of any mistake is insane.

The Greek word sin means to miss. As long as I buy into the organized church's Gospel I'm going to suffer from insanity. We obviously need the law to kill the five sense man who sees himself as a sinner and low down worm of the dust. The serpent that must crawl upon his belly all the days of his life is the mind that believes in an imperfect creation. It is the mind gone prodigal.

This is the mind that judges between what he sees as good and evil. All of us were there at one time. All who have gone beyond the dual mind, and those who haven't, all of us, have come a very long way since we left the Absolute. Least I offend anyone I'll speak of myself here, and all who see themselves here may join me. I left the Fathers house perhaps billions of light years ago.

I have come up through all forms of life, from the mineral kingdom to the organic kingdom to the animal kingdom to the human, which is the leading edge of creation. I and the Energy that created all of creation are one. If I've not come up through all life forms then the one who has, would have to be a separate entity from me, yet only one exists.

I can gaze up at the stars at night knowing that the creative energy intelligence which is my very source created them. I am one with this source.

The pure in heart to me are those who had the heart purified from duality. When I see through the single eye I can see nothing but God, because I then realize that nothing else exists. Jesus would have known these things but was very limited in what he could reveal to the people.

Even the little he did reveal eventually got him crucified. The Master was I believe an advanced soul. He was far ahead of us on the evolutionary journey. That is why he developed single vision at such a young age. At twelve he was already referring to God as his Father he knew the significance of God being the Father of all. He knew that God being the Father meant a tad more than just the one who created all things out of nothing which incidentally even God could not do.

He knew that the "Nothing" that God created everything out of was God. There was nothing else to make anything out of except God. The funny concepts of the church today would have me believe that God created everything out of nothing. The Church is right, but it's "dead right." As the Absolute was "nothing," then nothing existed. This "nothing" that was before anything, exploded from a desire to expand and express.

We cannot know what this absolute was that dwelt in unapproachable light. We only know that whatever it was it was nothing, because nothing was all that existed. I would ask the "Five fold ministry to explain to me what exactly this "nothing" was. The dual mind is not up to the task. Perhaps we shall never know the source in any way we could define it until we finally return home. When we do, we will have become that which no man can possibly understand.

We could say that the God we pray to is the Ego of the Absolute, the Source of everything. First came the God of the Old Testament. What if through evolution that one we see in the O.T. through evolution became Jesus our savior? God is ever changing as he gains experience through all the forms he is animating. Can I separate anything my mind can conceive from the creator? That is the insanity of the dual mind. There is creation which is an emanation of the eternal one. Jesus gave me the God of love.

Paul gave me the God who is Love. It's all God! This is what I get when I read the words... "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." Jesus when Thomas asked him to show them the Father said, "Thomas, have I been with you all this time and you still don't know me? He that has seen me, has seen the Father" how then can you say show me the Father? Jesus knew who he was, and it did not constitute him an anti Christ.

Sayings like that eventually got him killed. He was not anti Christ and neither is anyone else who infers that they and the Father are one. As Walter Lanyon says, unless I can look Satan in the face and see God I've not seen the truth concerning oneness. Regardless of where I happen to be on this path, no one is loved of God any more than I am. God has no favorites. Cain killed his brother Able. Cain represents religion. Religion will always kill anything that it feels threatened by.

The natural carnal dual minded man will attack something he doesn't understand. The spirit of Christ is one of live and let live. Long ago I knew that my thirst for answers would eventually be answered. Those answers came and they were for me. I share freely what I see. I realize I see through a glass darkly as everyone else. What I see true today, may not necessarily appear as true for me tomorrow. There was a time when I believed that my salvation could be lost.

Today I believe nothing of the kind. I once believed that I needed to live my life in a way that pleased God. Today I believe that my only real goal should be to love myself and all of Gods creation, especially all men. I totally believe the scriptures when they tell me that love is the fulfilling of the law. Today, my one rule of thumb is this... I can do anything as long as it does not hurt anyone else in word or deed. As for pleasing God, he is pleased with his creation. What appears as evil to me has a purpose. The end will justify the means.

At the end of the day evil is existent only in the double mind.
