

THE PATH...

At some point all paths converge into one. After this, home is neither here nor there, but both here and there depending on whether I use the intellect or the spirit for focusing.

Everyone is on their own personal path. The path I'm on is not the same as anyone else's, yet every path leads to the same place.

I believe that when I do what is called die I will find myself in very familiar soundings, more familiar than any place I've ever been on this earth. At some point I'll say to myself wow! I had totally forgotten about this place. There have been times when I felt a longing to go there yet I am not quite ready to do so. I must admit however it seems to attract me more and more as time passes.

I know that if it were not for the life I have today, which I truly do enjoy, I would perhaps under different circumstances use all my energy to go there now. It's a good place, and it is in this place that I can rest my weary spirit before re-entering this earth plane once again or perhaps choose a different reality that I've not traveled before.

I'm a driver for Hertz cars, so everyday I'm driving the freeways and also the little towns. Sometimes as I drive through the little towns an awareness steals over me that where I am in that moment is of my creation, and it is in these times that I have the feeling that none of what I'm experiencing is real; but it's ok.

It's ok, because when you begin to awaken in your dream and it comes to you that what you are experiencing is only a dream, this understanding brings with it the knowing that you are in control, not the ego and not the intellect but your greater identity. The euphoria that you experience in those few moments can be unspeakable. The knowledge of God will bring all of us into the rest. I liked what I read on one of the threads.

They spoke of resting from the everlasting attempt to know the answers. That they were beginning to let go knowing that the knowledge of God would come from within them when they were ready for it without lifting a finger to acquire it. I have put their sayings into my own words but in essence that is what they were saying.

"They that wait upon the lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings of eagles, they run and not be weary, they shall walk and not faint"
"In your patience possess ye your souls"

Letting go is only a matter of trust