

TWO POINTS Of VIEW...

Long ago I came to realize that if we've come to a certain place on this journey we are all on we will realize that there are two options or two ways that we can view things.

One is from the ego's point of view and one is from the absolute point of view. For example, from the ego's point of view which is based on the relative world, we have a past and a probable future. We were born, we grew, we had experiences, many of which we can consciously remember. We are conscious of a past and we anticipate a future.

This relative point of view is what gives the microcosm and also the macrocosm {these two are one} the experiences it all needs to expand. As man, we just naturally see everything from the relative's point of view. However, there's a level of consciousness that we have, that is not based on the relative, but this level can also see things from the absolute point of view.

For example, from my human point of view, or from the ego's point of view or you could also say from the relative's point of view, we see time. We see past present. From the view of the absolute, it's all over, it's already happened. So obviously when in my post I said that I was convinced that the movement I was in was backed by the creator, this was a statement made in what we view as time, or the relative. But in terms of the absolute truth all that we think of as happening now has already happened.

There are times {if you've seen this} when you can almost see everything from the view of the absolute. it's as though you almost, but not quite, step outside of time and as this experience transpires you sense freedom, total freedom, because at that instant you realize that there is a place in consciousness where you're eternally safe from time and all that can happen within that illusion.

You stand there in that instant with the realization that in this true state of Being there is nothing in existence but you, hence what could there be to harm you. You then know that you are the illusion and you are also the creator of the illusion, that all of what seemed to take billions of years was all completed in a single wild idea that was all self induced by you.

After all... who else but you would be capable of creating such a thing, which is a twisted thought that you indulge in knowing that there is no one else but you in all of your created illusion. You have the unlimited capability of creating any situation lasting a moment of time, {as the illusion goes} or for untold billions of years, and that any time you have chosen {before losing yourself in the illusion} you can step out of the illusion you've created and bask in the safety of your own omnipotence.

You know that once in the illusion you will become lost in same, which is the plan and what makes everything work, that at another level of consciousness you know for certain that ultimately you the omnipotent one can never be ultimately lost for your very nature is such that you must always return to the reality of now. You realize that it is you who set the time of the awakening be it one year or ten hundred billion, you will awaken at the appointed time appointed by you before entering the illusion.

You know that to become lost in the illusion means that you will forget everything which in turn will result in the misuse of your power thus creating the contrast you will then label “good and evil”. This good and evil seed in the minds of all the forms you created by the illusion creates the beautiful contrast that will always result in the expansion of all that you will become as a result. Thus you stand there caught between time and eternity viewing the end from the beginning of which there really is no end.

You now realize that there will come that moment of awakening when you shall stand in the everlasting moment of eternity where nothing ever changes, and now is when you decide to do it all over again. It is in that awesome moment of no time that everything from your view while here is both true and false which would not be true without creating another illusion. To escape from the monotony of never change, “For I am God, I change not” I create the illusions, for it is from them I expand in experience which creates expanding knowledge which in turn creates more forms for more experience, which creates more knowledge from all the experience etc. etc.

Thus it is my sovereignty that is the guarantee that all is under my control. “I create good and I create evil, it is I the Lord that do all these things” “hearken unto me, and I will show you great and mighty things which thou knowest not” 7/19/09
